INNOVATIVE ACOUSTIC SOLUTIONS

COLLECTION
2024

PRIMARY REFLECTIONS CONTROL

- When a hi-fi system is playing, the listener hears a combination of direct sound coming straight from the speakers and multiple sound reflections coming from the room's surfaces.
- Some of these reflections arrive at the listening position very soon after the direct sound, and we call these first reflections.
- First Lateral Reflections may influence the stereo image (by shifting or broadening it) and the perception of spaciousness within the Hi-Fi room.

REVERBERATION TIME OPTIMIZATION (RT)

- Reverberation is the persistence of sound within an enclosed space as a result of repeated reflections or scattering from the room's surfaces or objects.
- The more persistent the sound is, the higher the reverberation will be and vice versa.
- The degree of reverberation may influence spaciousness and signal perception/ definition and the Reverberation Time (RT) is the acoustic parameter that quantifies it.
- In rooms with high RT's, where late reflections take a long time to be extinguished, the direct sound may be blurred, therefore compromising signal perception.
- In rooms with low RT's may end up sounding too acoustically "dry" or "dead", compromising the enjoyment of being enveloped by music.

SOUND FIELD ANOMALIES CONTROL

- Mainly two sound field anomalies that are likely to occur
- Flutter Echoes are repeated sound reflections caused by sound traveling between parallel reflective surfaces, such as walls, floor and ceiling.
- Use sound absorbing products and sound diffusers.
- By treating first reflections and reverberation one is already dealing with flutter echoes.
- Room modes occur in rooms due to the relationship between low frequency wavelengths and room dimensions. Small rooms such as Hi-Fi rooms normally have poor acoustic response at low frequencies due to these modes.
- Bass Trap solutions in the corners of the rooms, where high sound pressure levels occur, will enhance definition and clarity.
